FLASH GOES AN OIL WELL!

A 2-FOOT ERROR BALLOT TODAY FATAL TO 2 FOR BISHOP

Philadelphia, Sept. 9 (AP)—A miscalculation of two feet cost the lives of Louis K. Clothier, socially prominent sportsman, and Lieut. C. Theburn "Toby" Maxwell, national guard pilot, in an airplane crash near Norristown.

While sliding down to a landing the under-carriage of the plane struck the rim of a quarry pit.

Empress Eugenie Hats Give Danbury Business Boom

Dame Fashion has routed the Depression in one New England city. It was revealed today by the Business Week, in an article quoted by the New England country.

Revival of the Offenbach operetta in Paris this summer, with the appearance of the "Empress Eugenie" has given as the reason why many employees of the 18 hat factories in Danbury, Ct., are earning $16 a week.

Danbury is making 10,000 Eugenie hats every day. Many workers are putting in 17 hours daily. Other factories are working on these eight-hour shifts to fill the demand.

DETECTIVES IN CAST, AND SO IS MOTHER

Emily Grinnell of New Bedford Gets Thrill in New York; "Director" Is Arrested

New Bedford, Sept. 8—The bright lights of the movie lot dimmed today for Emily Grinnell, 15-year-old heiress—and she started back for home with her mama before even seeing a klieg.

Emily, who will make her debut in three more years, when she will link up with her three brothers and sisters in the social register listings, was found early today in a New York hotel, eagerly awaiting opening of the door into movie fame.

The 15-year-old girl, who is six feet tall and weighs 170 pounds, is a granddaughter of the founder of the Grinnell Whaling Corporation of New Bedford, and also inventor of the automatic sprinker system.

"STUDENT" HER FRIEND

Emily, in line for the fortune of one of New England's wealthiest families, was registered under the name of Emy Marshall and told police she had driven to New York Sunday with a Harry Bernstein, 22, declaring himself to be a student at the University of California.

Bernstein was arrested on a charge of abduction and later was held without bail as a fugitive from justice in Massachusetts.

The heiress disappeared Sunday night and her father, Lawrence Grinnell, former commander of a local American Legion post, placed detectives on her trail.

Grinnell, who is operator of the sprinker company, with main offices at Providence, told the detective of his daughter's movie aspirations and they traced her movements into New York.

"MONEY ENOUGH AT HOME

All the wealth of the family was placed at disposal of police and the detective in their efforts to find the girl and return her to the Grinnell summer home, "Birchfield Farm," South Dartmouth.

Emily told police she answered an advertisement in a movie magazine which offered to arrange introductions for persons anxious to meet film stars. She received a letter from Bernstein.

Since then she has been in frequent correspondence with Bernstein, she declared, and finally Bernstein wrote and offered to come East and drive her to New York for an audition with a motion picture producer.

"LET'S MAKE FAME

The meeting took place and the couple went to New York, Emily told detectives. She said she was given an audition with a screen producer after Bernstein had told her she had a marvelous voice.

Police say that while they were at the New York hotel Bernstein phoned his father, Lawrence Grinnell. He arrived a short time later and was arrested, charged with abduction.

Among those mentioned as likely to receive votes from the 203 clergymen and 259 lay delegates are:

Rev. Howard Chandler Robbins, former dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York; Rev. Dr. Frederick T. Buillon, rector of Christ Church, Greenwich, and Rev. William T. Hooper, rector of St. John's Church, Hartford.

Others mentioned are Dean Philomen H. Sturges of St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston; Rev. Dr. Samuel S. Drury, headmaster of St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.; Rev. Dr. John N. Lewis of Watbury; Rev. Elmore H. McKee of Buffalo, former Yale University chaplain; Rev. Dr. George L. Richardson, dean of All Saints' Cathedral, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. Dr. Frederick S. Fleming, vicar of the Chapel of the Intercession, New York; Rev. Donald R. Aldrich of New York; and Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie of New York.

Bermuda So Busy It Has to Import Labor

Montreal, Sept. 9 (AP)—S. S. Spurling, of the executive council of Bermuda, is here with a new talking point for his island. He says there is no unemployment problem there, but that on the contrary, it was necessary to import 653 English workmen to build a new hotel.

John Nicholas Brown and Bride Return

New York, Sept. 9 (AP)—John Nicholas Brown, who grew up as the richest boy in America, and his bride, the former Anne Kinsolving of Baltimore, are back from a long honeymoon. It began last October and was spent in Europe.

WORST IN HATS 'THE KIDNAP'

This is the "hat" used in an attempt to kidnap Miss Helen Shapiro, but it didn't fit. She was walking along Sound View ave., in New York, when attacked. She fought her assailant off by biting his fingers and he fled, leaving this bag which he tried to draw over her head. It is a cement bag, lined with leather and pierced to admit air. At one end was a nose lined with fur, so that when it was drawn about the neck it would not chafe. Altogether it is a carefully tailored affair, but Miss Shapiro prefers the Eugenie type. ## POLICE CHECK REVEALS FIVE PEN NAMES

Legal Fight to Recover Money He Took From Victims Is Blocked by Lawyer

The expose of how lonely women are lured into mail-order marriage clubs appears today on Page Seven.

Clarkburg, W. Va., Sept. 9 (INS)—In the hope of piercing the enigma of Harry Powers, West Virginia Bluebeard, the man with an alias for every murder committed, authorities planned legal steps to obtain the contents of the safe deposit box in a local bank belonging to the mail-order Lovelace.

"The key to this case depends on finding the true identity of the prisoner," said Detective Southern, in charge of the investigation.

Frustrated by the dogged silence of "Confess" as to what his real name and birthplace might be, authorities hope to open new trails by examining the contents of his safety deposit box.

Chief Duckworth said today that he was convinced no more bodies would be found in the vicinity of the "slaughter" house.

"We have thoroughly searched and dug around the home of Powers and at the 'murder cage' and 'lure farm' out in the country," said Chief Duckworth. "Subsequent developments elsewhere hinge on the discovery of Continued on Page 8, Column 1

BURGLARS LOOT REVERE STORES

Burglars were active in Chelsea and Revere last night, breaking into three stores and attempting to enter others by jumping the walls.

The Starr Roofing Co. 111 Arlington st., Chelsea, was robbed of $5 in change and $15 in brass pipe. John Kamenetz, 24 Beach st., Revere, lost $50 worth of tools. The store was stolen from the Beachmont Spa, at 730 Winthrop ave., Revere, owned by Shepard Wolfson.

AUTO OWNERS 'DODGE COST'

City Traffic Engineer John F. Hurley today added his voice to the swelling chorus of protest against the present form of the Massachusetts compulsory liability insurance act.

Speaking at the annual convention of the Eastern Association of Fire and Police Alarm Superintendents, in session at the Boston fire alarm headquarters, he declared the zoning system in effect under the act should be abolished.

"It is a well known fact," he said, "that hundreds of thousands of people living in high-rate insurance zones register their cars from low rate districts."

"Most of these are persons rich enough to maintain a summer residence where the low rate prevails, beyond the limits of the large cities."

"This results in the usual condition where the man of moderate means pays the bills."

CITY IN DRIVE ON MASSEURS

The city health department today launched a drive against unlicensed operators of massage parlors with the issuance of a default warrant for Miss Laura McCarthy, operator of a parlour at 100 State st.

Miss McCarthy, who, according to health officers, could not produce a license to operate, was summoned into court. She failed to appear, and a default warrant was immediately issued.

She will be the first of more than 200 unlicensed operators who will be haled into court, and failure to appear will bring a prosecution under the health department declared.

BOY PLUNGES 50 FEET IN AUTO

Princeton, Sept. 8 (AP)—A youth, believed to be John T. McHugh, of Reading, Pa., was critically injured early today when his automobile plunged over a 50 foot embankment on River Drive near the Providence entrance to the Red Bridge.

Thomas Allen of Hunter st., weakened by the crash as the auto hurtled over the embankment almost to the edge of the Seekonk river, ran to the scene and pulled the youth from the wreckage.

The boy was taken to Rhode Island Hospital.

WAR AGE IS HELD IN RUM CASE

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 8 (AP)—Stanley Morin, 45, who lays claim to a brilliant war record in the Lafayette Escadrille, famous French flying corps, was brought to Hillsboro County jail today in default of payment of a fine of $500 for liquor law violations.

Morin pleaded guilty in yesterday's federal court at Concord to possessing liquor and materials for manufacture at his farm near Laconia.

Asking leniency, he told Judge George F. Morrie that he had been in the place in a Lawrence man who had been federal agent and police raided the farm several weeks ago.

Federal officials said he claims to have shot down 53 German planes and won the cross de guerre and medals military.

Body Identified Concord, N. H., Sept. 8—The body of a man found in a freight car Friday was identified as that of Richard Carter.

SMART SOCIETY OF BOSTON AND NEW YORK WILL be interested to hear that Miss Sylvia Weld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Weld of Wareham on Cape Cod and Boston, will be married to Mr. Albert Smith Bigelow of Cohasset tomorrow at 4 p. m. at the Welds' summer home. It will be a family affair, very quiet indeed, and the Rev. Arthur Lee Kin-solving will perform the ceremony.

Miss Weld is a member of the Vincent Club and Junior League. She has yearnings for a stage career, having been affiliated with the Surrey Players of Maine for two summers. Mr. Bigelow was graduated from Harvard in '29 and he and his bride will sail immediately after the ceremony for Germany where Mr. Bigelow will study architecture. They expect to be gone for a year at least.

Mr. and Mrs. William Elkins (Eloise Weld) have returned from their honeymoon, for the wedding, and with another sister, Miss Priscilla Weld, will attend Miss Sylvia. Mr. Hugh Williams Bigelow will be his brother's best man.

Barbara Young in Good Health Again

IT IS WITH REGRET THAT WE HEAR OF THE ILLNESS this summer of Barbara Young, daughter of the B. Loving Youngs and one of the most beautiful and popular debutantes of last year. She has recovered sufficiently, however, to take on her new "job"—as all ambitious debs do nowadays—at Mrs. John Tucker's shop, "Madame et la Jeune Filles," taking the place of Eleanor Mason who will be married on October 3. Agnes Boardman, who has been attached to this smart establishment for two years, is still on the job in this smart shop. Charlotte Young, Barbara's pretty blonde sister, is going back to "Dobbs" again.

MR. AND MRS. SAM BACHELDER (Peggy Read) have been seen in London lately and I hear they are not in a hurry to get back to their native shores. Quite a different story from one of June's bride couples who were so "bored" on their trip that they cut it short and came home to Tommy and Diddy in 10 days when they were "bored" to stay away a month. If courting days are over, can Reno be far away?

STRANGE THAT ROBERT DEAT PAINE, JR., who is decidedly eligible, man of 30 has not been caught for ransom in these days of mob racketeering. He has been around the world and this year Mr. and Mrs. Paine went to Honolulu to meet him and accompany him home. It is really amazing that no one ever speaks of Robert's sentence with "Mrs. Paine" with the result: "Can you imagine it?" John Bryant Paine of Weston with FRANK. She enjoys a different side of life as she had last year when she took her entire family to Africa to shoot tigers. One of the daughters has a suitor beyond coast who was made of the skin of the animal shot by Mr. Paine. This form of sport is about the most expensive kind but who thinks of expense in the same sentence as the Paine fortune.

IT WAS A SAD HOMECOMING for Dudley Wade, who is fourth in the Princes of Wales' race to learn of the death of his brother, Carlton Smith, of Hamilton. Mr. Wade sought his Highland Light home in Scotland and called himself on the Baltic which docked Sunday at Boston.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH STOWE REARBY are having an AT HOME for their daughters, Miss Martha Mason Reary, on Saturday, 26th, at their estate on the Boston Post road, Weston. There will be dancing.

Muriel Church Miss Moshier Weds Friday Is Bride

Newport, R. I. Sept. 9.—At a quiet civil ceremony Friday afternoon, Muriel Vanderbilt Church, society's "Golden Girl," will be married to her childhood sweetheart, Henry D. Phelps, Providence bond salesman. "There'll not be any extended trip," she said, "in these hard times. There's no money available for such a long journey to Alaska right to business every minute these days. As soon as my brief honeymoon is over, Mr. Phelps will immediately return to his work, and that will be the end of it." Before leaving here for New York, Mrs. Church revealed for the first time that her coming marriage will be a civil ceremony. There has been much conjecture over this matter. She is a Catholic, and following her first marriage, she was very quiet. The ceremony will be at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon at the Fairmount estate of her mother at Manassett, Long Island. It will be very quiet, with only members of the immediate families and a few close friends in attendance.

PROMINENT IN NORTH SHORE CIRCLES

MRS. RANDOLPH TUCKER, of Wenham, daughter of Edward House, will be maid of honor at the wedding of Miss Katherine Pratt Weeks, who was snapped at the Essex Court Club.

MRS. SUMNER PINOREE of Flying Horse Farm, Hamilton, was an interested spectator at the Myopia Horse Show. Mr. and Mrs. Pincore will not proceed South until later.

Junior Leaguer Will Live in Cambridge

Miss Katherine Pratt Weeks and Mr. Frederick William Andrews are to be married today at 4:30 o'clock in the Church of the Redeemer, Chestnut Hill. Last evening the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Seelye Weeks, gave a dinner-dance for the bridal party. Miss Weeks has for her maid of honor Miss Katherine Peckett of Framingham, N. H. There are six bridesmaids, Miss Anita Andres of Arlington, a sister of the bridegroom; Miss Eleanor Pahey of Boston; Miss Harriet Pitt of New York; Miss James Cunningham Gray Jr. of Cambridge; Mrs. Theodore T. Hollander of Boston; and Miss Margie Ring of Brookline. Miss Weeks is a member of the Junior League and made her debut in the winter of 1928-29. Mr. Andrews is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Henry Andrews of Arlington and is a graduate of Dartmouth College. He is now attending the Harvard law school. After November 1 the young couple will be at home at 29 Prescott st., Cambridge.

Jacket Idea Is Popular

By ANN ARDEN

THE JACKET idea in dress has become so popular a fashion that the inevitable has happened. Not only are jackets the accepted style for suits, but their lines have been adapted to dresses also.

THIS YEAR two-piece dresses, which has every appearance of being a suit, is one of the most desirable of all daytime styles. MAJORING in chic for the college wardrobe is the model pictured, a two-piece costume of fine wool red and black. The black wool skirt has low-placed flares each side. The blouse top is of bright red wool, laced through eyelets in center front with cord of material, and topped by a small turn-over collar and revers. The slightly flared, long-sleeved bodice has a front, and covered slit pockets, that are repeated on the bell-shaped sleeves. The narrow belt of the skirt material is caught

Mrs. Hubbard Society Tries to Lionize Him Nancy Thouron Weds Sept. 19

Washington, Sept. 9 (U.S.)—Civil society has literally dragged Lieut. Scott Partridge, from his self-selected obscurity as an army officer, and is making a desperate effort to lionize him in his true role as Prince of Sims.

All of which the Prince rather modestly resents, preferring to devote his time to his studies at the advanced school of army engineers at Camp Humphreys, near England. "You know," he said, "no one ever paid any attention to me until the King of Sims and his wife, who is my sister, came to the States. Why I am just an ordinary citizen-soldier. I wish they would leave me alone."

But they simply will not, and that's an end to it. He is really a charming chap and a fine appearing soldier. He was graduated from West Point in 1929, and acquired the unmistakable polish that usually goes with it.

Registration Opens
Registration of voters in Washington will begin today and will continue at intervals to Sept. 25. The primary will be held on Oct. 13.

POLICE CHECK 5 NAMES FOR BLUEBEARD

the real person behind the disguises adopted by Powers.

The "man of mystery" used five known aliases—Harry Powers, Cornelius Pierson, Joe Gildaw, "Mr." Francis and "Mr. Blorgs."

LEMKE HEIRS TO FIGHT

The legal steps for the securing of the deposit box of Powers will be undertaken by counsel for the heirs of Mrs. Dorothy P. Lemke of Northboro, Mass., the fifth wife of the killer. The other known victims were Mrs. Asa R. Eicher of Paris Ridge, Ill., and her three children.

J. Ed Law, defense counsel for Powers, was supposed to have opened the box the day after Powers was arrested. Attachment papers served on the bank today disclosed that Law had left a receipt showing he had withdrawn contents from the box. The lawyer obtained a power of attorney from Powers for this move.

WOMEN HAVE THE MONEY

Meanwhile, a court battle which may be prolonged even after Powers has heard his fate from a jury was predicted in connection with the suit to recover property alleged to have been appropriated from Mrs. Lemke by Powers through fraud.

The suit charges that Powers obtained $15,000 in cash, securities and jewelry from Mrs. Lemke. It is also alleged that Mrs. "La" Powers, wife of the prisoner, and her sister, Eva Strother, were accessories in the fraud.

The women admitted Powers gave them a check on the day of his arrest for $3000 to transfer to their joint account, but declared they thought it was his own money.

The women, who have been grilled daily but with scant success, also maintain that the clothing and silverware of Mrs. Lemke and Mrs. Eicher found in their house, was there without their knowledge.

OTHER NAMES COME IN

Virtually everybody connected with the case has been receiving large quantities of mail from persons throughout the country.

Among the letters received by Chief Dickworth was one from H. W. Swanson, attorney of Devils Lake, N. D. It related that a 18-year-old girl had been murdered there in a hotel in June, 1921, and suggested that perhaps Powers was connected with the crime.

The prisoner, under the name of Joe Gildaw, was known to have been in the Dakotas a few years after that time.

A woman from Buffalo, N. Y., whose name was withheld, sent a letter which read, in part, as follows:

"Harry Powers has been in the matrimonial bureau game for ever five years. I joined a matrimonial bureau in 1925, then called the Valley View Matrimonial Club of Valley View, Neb. The following spring I received letters from Harry Powers, then living in Crestline, Ohio, and also an address at Mansfield, O. I have letters and a photo from him."

"YOUNG WIDOW" IS SHY

Another letter from a woman in Erie, Pa., who signed as "A Young Widow," told how she corresponded with Powers.

"I would like to give you my name, but I can't do that," she wrote. "I am sorry. I have never been ashamed of my name and I have to conceal it now."

The letter said she corresponded with Powers at the instance of a man giving his name as George Payne. She said she was told that a man called Cornelius Pierson could give her work.

LOOKING FOR MONEY

"He asked me if my husband had left me much money—he already knew I was a widow—and he just grinned when I told him I did not have much money," she wrote.

"He gave me Box 277, Clarkburg, and Box 100, Detroit, to write to. Pierson wrote me two letters, both of which inquired about my money and my relatives, and then I stopped writing to him. I am sorry I ever trusted him."

A woman in Muskegon, Mich., who said she got a letter Aug. 22, 1931, from a man signing his name "Cornelius A. Driscoll," Delma, Ia., wrote she believed the letter was from Powers.

Mrs. Jesse Shiren, of Jackson, Miss., wrote:

"I am sure Powers is the same man who brought his dirty work into our state a few years ago and gave men cause to want to know drawn around his neck. I am sure you can look it up around East Chicago, Ind., for other victims."

IDEALISTS MUST NOW FACE THE MUSIC OF THEIR BLUFF

By ROBERT E. ROGERS.

THE BURDEN OF PROOF is beginning to lie more and more heavily on the idealists in politics and on the humanitarians in criminology and penology. The bland assurances, to which we have become so accustomed, that direct democratic control in politics and a policy of pleasant jail, short sentences and liberal paroles in the treatment of criminals must without question be successful because they are "democratic," "modern," "scientific," and the like—these oft-repeated bland assurances no longer carry conviction.

The direct primary and the referendum have not cleaned up politics, and "scientific" humanitarianism has not stopped crime or reformed criminals. In both cases, on the contrary!

I link these two movements together for a reason which may not be obvious, but which is historically valid. Both are the fruits of a single movement, which got under way in the late 80s and early 90s. It was largely the result of the advent of college men and women into social service and public life, fresh from colleges in which they had been taught the untold theories of those new and untold pseudo-sciences, sociology and social ethics.

For every student who was fortunate enough to sit under such a hard-boiled realist as William Graham Sumner of Yale, with his sceptical doctrine of "the forgotten man," there were dozens and perhaps hundreds who sat under teachers who were at heart romantic poets and daughters of Rousseau, who believed that the democratic man should be the measure of all things; that the crowd should be given the freest possible access to the public trough and the legislative grist mill.

Purifying and Ennobling

Their theories found favor in the experimental West and were slowly but steadily forced upon the realistic East. These theories reached their climax, perhaps, in Roosevelt's "progressive" campaign and Wilson's first term; the direct primary, the initiative, referendum and recall, the anti-trust prosecutions, the Adamson bill and the like.

They were enormously reinforced by the urge toward woman suffrage, which, we were told, would purify and ennoble politics. For over a decade now women have been voting and "progressive" measures have been generally established in the United States.

The second aspect of the movement, which believes that all men are naturally good and are made bad only by sickness or by society, has been with us in strength for about the same length of time. There has been steady pressure on Legislatures to pass laws giving the wrong-doer increased advantages in his court battles to escape the consequences of his wrongdoing.

The advocates of juvenile courts have been steadily pushing up the age at which a criminal act is considered only a juvenile offense. Coincidentally, the average age of the criminal has dropped lower and lower. Intermediate sentences, sentences running concurrently, and the parole as a matter of course rather than as an exception, have become the rule. Agitation against capital punishment has reached the stage of hysteria. Ever since Osborne's ill-fated experiments in prison reform, public attention has been focused on attempts to make prison life rather easier and more luxurious than the life of the poor wage-earner outside. Dr. Stearns' experiment in Norwood is perhaps our most recent striking example of these theories in practice.

The third angle of this belief, that if all temptation is removed man will naturally want to be good, was the successful drive for prohibition.

Nothing Has Worked Out Right

Now in 1931 it becomes increasingly obvious to many intelligent, well-intentioned people that none of these experiments has worked sufficiently well to allow their proponents to sit back and take them for granted as a matter of fact, it may be said that they have hardly worked at all.

Political incompetence and corruption have certainly not decreased under the system of direct democratic control. Crime has certainly not decreased, and it is very doubtful whether it has increased under the system of treating criminals as victims of their own bodily or mental sickness or of criminal perversion. And it is hardly necessary to say that prohibition has not succeeded.

Last week President Lowell headed a list of 10 reputable and responsible Republicans and Democrats who demand a partial return to the old system of political responsibility by means of a pre-primary convention, on the ground that the primary system is demonstrably working badly and in its intention to reform old evils has created new ones quite as serious.

Last week, also, Governors Ely and Roosevelt, District Attorney Bishop, Judge Dillon, Superintendent Crowley and others paid their respects in no uncertain terms to the new penology which is represented in Massachusetts chiefly by Commissioner Stearns.

The idealists in politics will try to make out that President Lowell and his friends want a return to boss-rule and corruption. The humanitarians will try to make out that our governors, prosecutors and judges want a return to brutal and vindictive penology. But that sort of talk won't wash any longer. The idealists and humanitarians have had their chance, a full and fair opportunity to try out their theories. They have tried them out. Demonstrably they have failed to effect the results which were promised. Demonstrably they have created new evils worse than the old. The burden of proof no longer rests on the conservatives. It rests indisputably on the self-styled liberals.

They have raised us on a bluff. Now we're calling them!

Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American.

Everett will have eight candidates for mayor at the municipal primaries on October 13 according to nomination papers filed or in circulation. The candidates are Mayor Michael C. Cahill, who is also a representative to the Legislature, and Aldermen Chester Brown and James J. Smith.

New Plant in Newton to Provide 150 Jobs

Unemployment in Newton, which is less than in other cities of its size, will be further decreased in the very near future, when the Rose-Derry Corp., formerly of Derry, N. H., will open the large plant of the Boston Wood and Paper Co. on Chapel st., Nonantum, to start the manufacture of mattresses. More than 150 workers, most of them to be recruited from Newton, will be employed.

RARE POISON IS PUT IN FOOD OF VICTIM

Yee Foaz Shu Believed to Have Been Trained for Months by His Slayer

A Chinese enemy, believed by police to have trained Yee Foaz Shu twice across the United States and the Pacific, was being sought today as the slayer of the wealthy Boston importer after he had died in agony in his Hudson at room, a short time after eating poisoned food. The importer returned to Boston five weeks ago after a visit to China and police working on the case believe he had been trained for months by his slayer. Police believe his slayer placed the lethal poison in the food, when the victim stepped out of the kitchen. The poison that brought death to him is little known in countries outside of China, where its power has been known for centuries. It is a poison that deals with lightning rapidity according to authorities. Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner for the southern district, expressed his probe of the case on the theory that the feud—believed to have been caused by business enmity—was of long standing. Shu was married and leaves three children. His wife and three children live in Canton, China, and the others reside in Boston.

ENGAGEMENT TO ANOTHER GRL REPORTED

Schuster, Son of Governor's Council Member, Surprises Friends by Remarriage

Married, divorced and remarried in little more than a year, Winfield A. Schuster, of East Douglas, son of Walter E. Schuster of the Governor's Council, today was on his second honeymoon with the same bride.

And, added to his short-lived but completed marital life, Schuster left behind him a girl to whom he was reported engaged. Schuster was married last night to F. Eleanor Freeman Schuster of Worcester, who divorced him last December on the grounds of mental cruelty.

News of the wedding did not leak out until today, after the couple had been for a honeymoon trip to Bermuda.

WEDDED YEA AGO

The "young" girl, whose engagement to Schuster had been announced in Worcester newspapers, is Miss Maud Scuffs, daughter of a Worcester insurance official. The Schuster marital procession, officiated July 26, 1930, when the wealthy mill owner's son and the then Miss Freeman were married in the Wild Goose Club, Harmony, Me.

Returning to East Douglas, the couple were met by a brass band and feted with a street parade. Three months later the bride filed for divorce, alleging mental cruelty charge on Schuster's statement that he was sorry he married her.

ATHLETE OF NOTE

The decree was granted by Judge Chamberlain in Worcester court last December. Schuster is captain of the Brown University baseball team in 1928 and played semi-professionally in the Blackstone Valley league in Rhode Island. He is associated with his father in the mill. Mr. Schuster is a graduate of the Garland school in Boston's Back Bay, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Freeman of Worcester.

After the second honeymoon, the couple returned to the East Douglas home they occupied before the divorce.

EUGENIE BECOMES EMPRESS OF FRANCE

Reward of Virtue Comes in Dazzling Royal Nuptials at Paris

By LAURA VITRAY
"Sire, does your majesty take in matrimony Her Excellency Mademoiselle Eugenie de Montijo, here present?"

"Yes—"
"Mademoiselle de Montijo, does Your Excellence take in marriage His Majesty Napoleon the Third, Emperor of France, here present?"

"Yes—"
But of course that was only the civil ceremony, to be followed a day later by the religious one, in the cathedral of Notre Dame. The throne room in the Pavillon of Flowers of the Elysee Palace was like a garden of variegated blooms, fluttering and whispering.

Emperor Remains Seated as Bride Enters Room

The Emperor, in accordance with the best court etiquette, was obliged to remain seated on his golden armchair when his bride entered the room. She was wearing the white velvet wedding gown of perfect purity, that Paimpre, the great couturier had designed.

Her arms were bare, her gold-embroidered locks, unfurling and falling in molten splendor at the nape of her neck, none so crown ever could cover a vanishing maidhood, and the fish lace train of white sea foam trailed like a sign for departing innocence.

Even her creamy skin, untouched by sun and her deep blue eyes were a wistful, yet frightened glance, as every young girl must as she stands on the door of matrimony.

The secretary of state, who presided the ceremony, stood stiffly on a small platform close to the throne, nervously passing the pages of the imperial Bible, one of which he said to have unconsciously rumpled—while the ladies and gentlemen of the court, in richest attire, pressed forward eagerly as Eugenie traversed the waxed floor to the throne.

Open Hints of Night Sortie by Eugenie

She is reported to have tripped on the lowest step of the three leading to the chair beside him, but he graciously reached out his hand and caught her.

After they had yessed each other in accordance with law, and the Countess de Montijo, vice Scotch mamma, repaired to their furnished apartment at 12 Place Vendome—namely at 12, a man given to his liquor cups and wholly untrustworthy, insisted the next day that he had seen Eugenie, thickly veiled, in a purplish gown, emerge from the far at 12:25 sharp, and hop into a closed carriage bearing the imperial insignia.

Guards of the Elysee Palace also reported that they had observed a thickly veiled lady escorted late that night to the private apartments of the Emperor.

A Change-Eyeses columnist, valued popular in those days, dared to insert in his column the following day a veiled hint as to these proceedings, accompanied by the query:

"What will my brother Louis say, who once was her mother's friend?"

Paris was shocked at this reference to the Countess de Montijo, and Kirpatrick's

DAILY TRUE STORY

TURN OF THE WHEEL

THEY'D KNOWN EACH OTHER FOR YEARS

EVERYBODY TOOK IT for granted that Dorothy Bedell would marry Tom Scarritt. They'd known each other for years; they'd gone to school together; they'd played and driven together. And the fact that Tom was punier on one of the big ships only added to the romance.

Tom had taken that job with reluctance. "I don't think it's just right to you," he said to his fiancée; "it'll mean we'll be separated a lot."

"But it's too good a chance to lose," Dorothy argued. "I'd feel as though I were standing in your way if I let you refuse it."

So Tom took it. His first trip kept him away nearly three weeks, but he could not conceal his enthusiasm. "That's the life," he said, "the best of food, the finest of people; it's too bad they won't let pursuers have their wives aboard."

As time went on Tom evinced less and less desire to settle down, and at last Dorothy saw that his heart was with his job and not with her. She cried a good deal over it by herself, but after all there was nothing she could do and so sadly she wrote Tom and broke their engagement.

His reply was a sympathetic agreement that a life like his and marriage didn't blend, but he assured her of his undying esteem and wished her every happiness. The townspeople learned the facts in time and Dorothy was duly pitted, but as far as they could see there was no fault in her. She was just the same cheerful, efficient young woman she had always been and the consensus of opinion was that Tom Scarritt didn't know when he was well off.

Perhaps it was fate and perhaps it was no more than Dorothy deserved that she happened to meet Paul Dutton making sketches in the neighborhood of unstable. He was an unassuming young man who seemed to find his sole solace in a pipe and a lot of paint brushes. Dorothy was wandering along the dunes when she came upon an artist set in the sand containing a partly finished sketch of an ancient ship. It stood before it admiringly, unaware that the artist was watching.

Has the Spirit

Dorothy Told Paul

He walked up behind her. "Like it?" he asked. Dorothy wheeled her face toward him. "Yes, oh yes, you've got the spirit of the thing."

"Have I?" he said, really thinking so. "That's a compliment, I say."

She surveyed him more calmly now, seeing a not slender young man of medium height with deep brown eyes and a mouth with a quizzical twist to it.

"I take it you live around here," he went on.

"In the village," she answered. "Well, I've never been here before. I'm stopping at the inn—perhaps you'll be interested in seeing this little thing develop, which is to say I hope you'll happen around again tomorrow."

"Dismissal accepted," smiled the girl. "Yes, I'm sure I am interested and I will be around tomorrow."

Folks of Dorothy kept coming before Dutton as he painted the day away. A perfectly natural girl, he thought, yet strangely sweet and unassuming. Yet she had a look in her as though she'd been through a lot—he began to wonder about her.

The following morning when she appeared he was conscious of a sense of relief. "Well, he rose and bowed. "Thanks for coming. Take a look and pass judgment."

Dorothy looked—stood for some time in silence—then she said, hesitatingly: "I think if you'd put a little more blue in the sky, where the clouds are breaking through, it would be more like the real thing, wouldn't it?"

"Let's see." He looked himself on the camp stool and began to work on the picture. With a few swift strokes he deepened the blue of the sky. Then he looked up. "That better?"

"That's it," said Dorothy. "That's right."

Their acquaintance, begun in such a casual way, grew with the passing days, and Dorothy became a caller at the little house where Dorothy lived with an elderly aunt, her sole surviving relative. The aunt was quick to sense the situation.

"That young man is in love with you," she said. "Do you care for him?"

"I like him," said Dorothy. "He'll ask you to marry him."

continued her aunt, "and what'll you say?"

"Why I think I'd say yes," answered her niece. "Do you think it would be horrible of me?"

"If should call you a fool if you didn't," the older woman retorted. "That is, if you're thinking you're any alliance to Tom Scarritt—you were well out of that, my dear."

"Tom was almost a habit," said Dorothy.

He Kissed Her

And Asked Her to Marry Him

"There's only one thing," her aunt went on. "What do you know about this young man besides the fact that he paints rather nice pictures? Is that all he has to depend on?"

"I don't know a thing about him," admitted Dorothy, "except that he's a pleasant companion and knows how to paint sea scenes. Come to think of it, it's funny he's never mentioned his family except in a general way."

Dorothy learned more about Paul that evening when he arrived after supper with the inevitable pipe between his lips.

"See here," he said when they were alone in the old-fashioned porch. "I believe in being direct."

"Yes, I will," said Dorothy.

He leaned over and drew her to him, kissed her with a fervor that surprised her. "Good girl," he said. "I'm sure you're worth my while."

Now and now I'm going to tell you how glad my family'll be to know you. You see, I've always been a sort of wandering spirit, getting my mind will give me an anchor. I want to keep on with my painting. I don't think having little money that's good for you ought to make a boater of you."

We've got a place at Bar Harbor, but I'd be coming around in his spirit and he'll stop here day after tomorrow and we'll go aboard."

"By the way," said Paul, "we've got a man from this village on the Enfield. Name's Scarritt. Used to be a pursuer on a liner. Father liked him so much he got him as sort of steward and secretary on the yacht. Ever meet him?"

Dorothy hesitated, then she said: "Yes, we were engaged once."

"Oh, I see. Lucky for me he didn't appreciate you."

"All names of characters in this story are fictitious."

SUICIDE THEORY IS SCOUTED IN LYNN CASE

New Clues Bared in Police Probe of Students Who Died by Gas

Hunt for a mystery man in connection with the death of Viola L. Leppanen, 17-year-old Lynn high school girl, who was found dead from gas inhalation Sunday, was spurred today by new information from the girl's closest friend, Mrs. Helen Harper of Essex st.

"Viola was happy as a lark, Saturday; she never took her own life," said Mrs. Harper. "The police ought to get busy and find whoever did it."

"It is not true that she had an argument with me. Saturday we went on a shopping tour, and she was in the back of the spring. She bought a new hat and arranged to meet two girl friends to go to a dance."

"We went in a movie and she laughed heartily at the comedy. She told me she was planning to go to a party early this week."

William Whittride of North Common st., Lynn, who gave the police the name of a man he believed Viola was keeping company with, has previously insisted she was not a suicide. Her parents also refuse to credit the suicide theory.

In far-off Rome-on-Tiber Mussolini starts to cry—
He's thinking of the flowers he'll surely have to buy!

That apparently is what is on the cards. But you never can tell. Robert is so huge and ponderous that he can't get out of his own way and offers an ideal target for the Schaaf salvo. But the good Signor is as big as a mouse and as strong as an ox and he can take it, how he may take it. He's dead game. By the way, did you ever see Italian soldiers? They are the fiercest of men, whose veins run more red, red, fighting courage than the way in which flows the blood of Caesar's legions. The good Signor Robert is the type on whom Master Schaaf is liable to break his lance. But I don't think he will. I think he will be a good deal of an Archibald, if Master Schaaf should butt the tooth of his trade. You can picture competent, rally-polity Two Chair Johnny Buckley rolling around weeping and wailing like Rachel—or was it Bedelia?—when he is told that he is to be a useful thing to have your mail ticket crumple up and crumple on you.

Is Roberti likely to do the same thing against Schaaf, tomorrow night? Well, Robert's chances wouldn't bring ten cents in the open market. Robert's hasn't been getting any younger. And young Mister Schaaf can wallop like a whole ringful of Monte Munns. If Schaaf doesn't chop Roberto Roberti into boarding house hash or tell him a bedtime story inside of a half dozen rounds the fans will be surprised. You can cable Mussolini that he better be buying Shamrocks.

Gayu seeking to knock Iszy out with a punch in the bread basket, hit the board. The concussion knocked the wind out of poor Iszy. But Gayu busted his manlie. The Mexican gave a startled and agonized "Ow-o-o-o-oo," and danced around the ring waving his wounded flipper. Poor Iszy, wind knocked out, wrapped himself around the ropes gasping for air. It was a draw!

An agonized grunt from Izzy, a bellowing "Ow-on-on" from Gusy. The referee was puzzled—he didn't know what to do. Poor Izzy grasped his tummy, the Mex waved wounded paw. We fans expired from laughter, the decision was "a draw"!

the League. But in a long period of time, he has been a good friend of the League, and he has been a good friend of the League.

The first of these features of the novel is the way in which the author has chosen to tell the story. The narrative is told from the point of view of the young man, who is a member of the 'Society' and is therefore a participant in the events. This is a first-person narrative, and it is this which gives the novel its intimacy and its immediacy. The second feature is the way in which the author has chosen to structure the novel. The novel is divided into three parts, each of which is a self-contained story. The first part is the story of the young man's discovery of the 'Society' and his subsequent involvement in it. The second part is the story of the young man's journey to the 'Society' and his subsequent involvement in it. The third part is the story of the young man's journey back to the 'Society' and his subsequent involvement in it. The third feature is the way in which the author has chosen to write the novel. The novel is written in a simple, straightforward style, which is easy to read and understand. The language is clear and concise, and the sentences are well-constructed. The overall effect is one of a well-written, engaging novel that is easy to read and understand.

MEET THE WORLD'S MOST POPULAR CHAMP

MADE BIG HIT WITH VARDON AND RAY

By BILL GRIMES

From all parts of the world Francis Ouimet, the newly crowned United States amateur champion, has received messages from all corners of the globe. He is the only man in the world who has won the United States amateur championship in three consecutive years. He is the only man in the world who has won the United States amateur championship in three consecutive years. ## Ouimet Remembers Names for Long Time

At the Country Club in 1927, Francis was waiting to see off a young lad who was standing at the ropes and spoke to him, saying "How do you do, Mr. Ouimet?" Now, he does not remember a name, but he does remember a name. He is the only man in the world who has won the United States amateur championship in three consecutive years.

CALLS FOR WOODPOOR STREET

CHARGE MADE BY BRITISH PRESS

London, Sept. 9 (AP)—Most London newspapers this morning merely recorded the news of the admission of Gar Wood regarding the start of his race at Detroit against Kaye Don, British speedboat champion, and the comment from the American press.

The Telegraph, however, says Wood did an ill service to the traditions of American sport by "outgunning the most elementary instincts of sportsmanship."

"Unhappily," the Telegraph says, "his action must inevitably make a deeper impression upon the public mind than the unbroken record of fair play that has been the hallmark of American racing in so many fields of sport."

"He violated," says the Morning Post, "one of the written rules of fair play, which can never be written. We sympathize with the Americans in the reflection he has cast on their sportsmanship."

Testimonial Trophy for Kaye Don

Detroit, Sept. 9 (AP)—Suggestive of a trophy that the people of Detroit present a testimonial trophy to Kaye Don, British challenger who won one heat of the Harmsworth trophy and was disqualified and overturned in the second.

Stewart Stanley, attorney, and C. B. Clark offered the suggestion that the trophy be given as a testimonial to a sportsman and a gentleman.

Wood Fooled Briton in Speed Race

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 9 (AP)—The Harmsworth trophy race between Kaye Don and Kaye Don today reversed its decision which declared a power boat race between Gar Wood and Kaye Don.

Of greater interest to racing men was the frank admission of Wood that he deliberately had disqualified himself and thereby had flung to gain victory.

Two years ago the Garret had the element of surprise with it to upset the boys and take the championship, and last year there was still a question as to its real power.

The Bobcats answered the question in decisive manner and three opponents on the state series are now "pointing" for them with the hope of ending the two-year winning streak.

Many Find New Mission on the Air

Emerging from all walks of life, prompted by the promise of a better and better radio future, many are finding a new mission on the air.

As long as we have had a radio, the top of the world has been in the air. As long as we have had a radio, the top of the world has been in the air. As long as we have had a radio, the top of the world has been in the air.

A's to Accept Applications Saturday

Philadelphia, Sept. 9 (AP)—The rush for tickets to the World Series games in Philadelphia is just three days away.

Thomas S. Shibe, president of the Athletics, announced today that applications for the coveted pastebards will be received at Shibe Park, starting Saturday.

Applicants were advised, as in former years, that money or checks should not accompany requests for tickets. Applicants whose requests are granted will be notified where to obtain and pay for their tickets.

The world champion Athletics need only six more games to capture the American League pennant. They have a chance to cut the number to four games today.

CHANGE GRID PLANS AT BATES

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 9 (AP)—Bates, which for 20 years "has been" in the Maine college football races, and came out of the rut in 1929 to take the state championship, repeating again last year, may forsake the safe and sane type of attack this fall and gamble a bit.

In the two seasons with the Carlisle, Coach Dave Morey has relied for the most part on orthodox football with little of a fancy nature to land color.

This year, with a line that has but two veterans and a wealth of backfield material, it is believed he may fall back on his bag of tricks.

Had "Beautiful" Forward Passing Attack

At the close of last season when the Bobcats reversed its decision which declared a power boat race between Gar Wood and Kaye Don, of greater interest to racing men was the frank admission of Wood that he deliberately had disqualified himself and thereby had flung to gain victory.

Two years ago the Garret had the element of surprise with it to upset the boys and take the championship, and last year there was still a question as to its real power.

The Bobcats answered the question in decisive manner and three opponents on the state series are now "pointing" for them with the hope of ending the two-year winning streak.

SPORTS REEL

Silver Fox Fooled Briton. Look at the smiles on the faces of Gar Wood, left, and Olin Johnson, as they think of the way they fooled Kaye Don, Briton, into jumping the gun in the Harmsworth trophy race at Detroit.

Wood was the first to start the race, but Don refused to allow this. So Wood led Don across the line early and both boats were disqualified.

Down they go, those Braves of yore. They dropped their third straight game to the Boston Red Sox, and the Phils, by splitting even with the Giants, went into the week with a 4-4 record.

The Braves scored four runs in their first inning over in Brooklyn, and after losing that lead, came from behind to score two runs, and tie the score in the fifth inning, when they beat the Phils 4-3 on a four-run rally in the sixth.

STOCKS IN NEW YORK MARKET EARLY DECLINES

New York, Sept. 9.—Stock market leaders rallied in Wall St. today after making early gains yesterday.

By the end of the first half hour, early losses of a point or more had been largely cancelled or reduced, and several prominent issues were fractionally to a point higher. The day showed numerous transfers of 100 to 400 shares.

Bulls appeared to be trying for a technical rally on the theory that the market had been over sold last week and yesterday. Declines in the regular and regular exchange dividends by air reduction helped the market and sent it into a more than a point.

New York Central was not in its dividend rate of a 54 annual basis had been generally anticipated.

Such issues as U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Can, Westinghouse, General Electric and General Motors recovered to show gains of about a cent each. New York Central converted its early loss of a point into a gain of nearly as much. Canadian Pacific dropped 1 1/2 points, rallied slightly.

The weekly steel trade reported a slight up in operations, although it is not usually a heavy factor in the steel industry. The weekly report of freight car loadings showed a gain of about 15,000 cars, a gain less than the annual average gain for the period.

Shipping, however, had been opening at $1.65, 1/2 of a cent.

CENTRAL GOES ON $4 RATE

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad Company today reduced the quarterly dividend from $1.50 to $1.00, the second reduction in the history of the company.

A reduction from the $6 annual rate had been expected in Wall St. The $6 rate was established in 1929, but with the payment of a quarterly dividend of $1.50, the total dividend for the year had been reduced from the $6 annual rate to $4.50.

The company had been expected to reduce the dividend from $6 to $4.50, but the reduction to $4.00 was a surprise.

The common stock sold yesterday at $50.75, a decline of 1/2 point from the previous day's close.

The company announced a salary reduction of 10 to 20 per cent effective October 1, 1931.

The company is receiving over $500 and less than $160 per month will receive a 16 per cent reduction in salary.

These reductions will have their effect in the third quarter of 1931, when the company will have its third dividend of $1.00 per share.

Carloadings Gain Under Last Year's

Loadings of revenue freight for week ended Aug. 29 totaled 763,704 cars. This was an increase of 15 per cent over the same week last year, but a decrease of 220,746 cars below the same week of 1929.

$51,263,888 Paid by Standards Oils

Cash dividends payments by Standard Oil companies in third quarter this year will be more than $50,000,000 less the second quarter and show decrease of about $17,000,000 from third quarter of 1930, according to compilation of Carl S. Fluetschman & Co., New York.

Power Holding Unit Net Earnings Rise

American Commonwealth Power Corporation today reported net income of $1,082,102 for the 12 months ended July 31, last.

Prairie Provinces Wheat Is Estimated

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 9 (AP).—The wheat crop of the prairie provinces is estimated at 294,000,000 bushels in the annual estimate of the Canadian government.

$30,000,000 Merger in Firearms Field

A D. Post Co. official states his company will acquire a minority interest in a combination of firearms companies providing the Remington Co. succeeds in taking over the Remington-Union Metallic Cartridge Co. and Winchester Repeating Arms Co. More than $30,000,000 will be involved.

Perhaps the trouble with this generation is that it believes everything it's been told and nothing it's learned.

HOW ABOUT THE TELEPHONE?
(Letter: Mr. Newcomb)
At the Sunday School Convention in the Christian Church, last Sunday, they discussed the question: "Is the automobile a help or a hindrance to the Sunday School?" A. Youngs, Isaac Engle and Will Price took the affirmative. Frank Pierce took the negative. There was a good deal of interest in the subject.

UTOPIAN NOTE

Another guy, who never would be missed, is the success. Who has explained for years, without his vicer growing less. That although men still need to be industrious and smart, Success comes easier today than when he got his start.

Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching says college seniors know little, if any more than college freshmen. The majority of them probably are less. Quite a few freshmen know why they came to SIX months ago Wilberforce Duakes had one foot in the gutter and a yen for Socialism. But one day he had an idea and started writing letters to radio advertisers expressing appreciation for their crooners, jazz hands and beauty hints. Today he has a standing contract with thousands of broadcasting stations to keep their sponsors supplied with fan mail, and is paying alimony to four blondes.
